

Reading to Write: Say-Mean-Matter

1. Complete the Say-Mean-Matter chart.

What the text says:	What the text means: • Write what the text says in your own words.	Why this matters: • Why does this information matter? • Why is this important? • How does it affect individuals, society, the world, etc.
There was a recent survey of millennials asking them what their most important life goals were, and over 80 percent said that a major life goal for them was to get rich. And another 50 percent of those same young adults said that another major life goal was to become famous	A majority of young people surveyed say that getting rich and becoming famous is an important life goal.	• If young people focus on money and fame, then they will miss out on the best part of life. • They could pass these values onto their kids, creating a cycle of unhappiness.

11th grade, teacher-selected quote from an article

Now it is your turn.

Set up the following in your notebook.

Say	Mean	Matter

Remember:

Say: What does the text literally say?

Mean: What does the text mean? How can you interpret or explain it in your own words?

Matter: Why does this matter? How does it connect to larger ideas, issues, or contexts?

“We are what we repeatedly do. Excellence, then, is not an act but a habit.”
— Attributed to Will Durant (often linked to Aristotle)